NATAL AND TRANSITING SATURN

Saturn moves through the zodiac every 29 years, remaining in a sign for approximately 2 ½ years.

The sign and house position of Natal Saturn (Saturn at the moment of your birth) defines the area of life (house position) and the way Saturn's energies are released (sign position). Saturn works well in its own sign of Capricorn, in many cases defined as business expertise. It also works well in Libra where its rewards for hard work can be well expressed when in connection to relationships, balance and harmonious interchange.

On the other hand, Saturn may not work well in Cancer, as Saturn is known for its discipline and in certain cases heaviness. Saturn may not work well in Aries either because Aries pushes for results while Saturn restricts and delays and can put a halt to what Aries is trying to accomplish.

The aspects from other planets within the framework of the birth chart, however, must be taken into consideration for a full picture.

In the Natal chart, Saturn suggests that we must put our best foot forward in the area of life defined by its house position. This placement often suggests that hard work, a disciplined effort and sustained determination will eventually work out, offering stability and long-lasting outcomes reflected by the work you put into what is accentuated.

If Saturn is poorly placed in the Natal chart, you can expect challenges, delays, obstacles and hardships along the way. It is best not to take the easy route as you will eventually realize that there are no shortcuts. Determination and disciplined hard work are what matter. Saturn can be extremely detrimental or beneficial depending on its placement and aspects formed within the natal chart configuration.

While in its transit, Saturn can be quite the adversary for success and hold up achievement although, as mentioned earlier, if you dot all the "I's" and cross all the "t's", it can work favourably for you. There are no guarantees, however, when it comes to Saturn if it makes harsh aspects to natal positions in the birth chart while in transit.

Saturn will test your resilience, and your resolve. It is known as the teacher of the Zodiac. It does, however, reward you with a solid foundation and can also provide long-lasting rewards where owed. Much depends on its natal potential.

Natal Saturn is your blueprint for structure and discipline while transiting Saturn is a temporary restructuring or testing period when making contact in your chart.
