

TRANSITING SATURN OPPOSITION NATAL MC

Before we go into transiting Saturn opposition Natal MC (Medium Coeli), we should also understand that it will also be making a Conjunction to the IC (Imum Coeli). The Conjunction is actually more powerful than the Opposition and changes will take hold primarily within the family unit, the home environment and who we are in personal terms, perhaps a part that only we know.

Saturn can be very discriminating and astute with letting us know, through challenging conditions, where we need to build structure and what needs to be defined clearly. It does not hold back anything when it comes to the truth and will create what is needed, which may be through painstaking effort.

When we look at the opposition to the MC, the likelihood of this being stimulated by something that is taking hold either from within (the individual) or from outside influences, especially from family is strong. Perhaps the family moves, and the career or life objectives will also have to adjust along with this move. Perhaps the changes that are taking place at home cause an adjustments which affects the occupation and your goals in life.

Outside influences in a challenging manner push us to adjust, to reevaluate and to challenge ourselves to work through adversity that is present within our occupation. This is a challenging situation because perhaps things have been moving along smoothly and then there is a shift and work becomes a hinderance or our goals and aspirations may be difficult to follow. We might even have to adjust because our superiors or a parent now needs our care.

Perhaps the home front changes, and we now need more financial support to make things work more favorably. We may have to take on extra work or adjust our spending habits to make things work. Outside influences cause concern within our occupation, and because of others, we will be challenged. This can create more work, less time to be spent with family and more concerns about where life is taking us.

Remember during these challenges that Saturn is the teacher and will help us to build a solid foundation that we can rely upon in the future.
