

PLUTO OPPOSITION NATAL NORTH NODE

Because the North and South Nodes are always in Opposition with one another, the Conjunction of the South Node will be more significant than the Opposition of the North Node. Conjunctions are the most powerful of the Major aspects, while the Opposition runs about second.

Much will depend on if you also have Natal planets or angles connected to these positions. Squares will apply to both while Trines give one node a Trine and the other, a Sextile. The whole chart must be carefully delineated for an accurate translation, but we will look specifically at the energies of Pluto Opposition the natal North Node.

With the energies of the South Node Conjunction Transiting Pluto, this will be a time of transformation that is attached to feelings we have attached to security linked to the past. This may be a person or situation that no longer suits our evolution, and when Pluto is connected, it suggests that we are about to head into a period of letting go and releasing. It is time to move away from these situations or individuals, and we may have had hints along the way letting us know that a change of direction is heading our way.

There are likely Karmic implications and challenges because we may feel safe under the current conditions or with these people, but the time has come to move forward into our North Node path. Because the North Node is now in Opposition, in most cases, other individuals will be involved and perhaps they have been trying to make us change our destiny or causing our path to change in significant ways.

There will likely be power struggles along the way, and it may take as many as two years before the journey finally gets on course completely. Even after this time frame is finished, it will still take some time to fully understand why things went the way they did. We want to preserve what has been in place, but this will serve little purpose because when Pluto is involved life seems to take over and moves us to where we are meant to be.

This is the time to meet your destiny, and you likely will be fearful because it is new. It will also be exciting although you have never walked down this path before. You will not have a clue as to what to expect. Your world (area of life depending on the houses involved) is about to transform, and you can help create what is needed by not fighting the process.

You can swim against the current, but you will tire and eventually flow with the current which over time will take you exactly where you need to go. Listen to your gut. Your intuition may be strong with Pluto Opposition Natal North Node. Do not be too influenced by other people's intentions. This time is significant and will set the path for many years to come. Do not take this lightly.
