

NEPTUNE SQUARE NATAL IC

Transiting Neptune making a square to our Natal IC (Imum Coeli) will affect our family and home life, and in rare cases, when someone has been ill for a very long time, it speaks about the end-of-life conditions. At the same time transiting Neptune is making a square to our IC, transiting Neptune will be making a square to the MC (Midheaven). So, at the same time, our career, life path, goals and life's status will be affected.

The contacts that are made to the IC within the natal chart as well as other transits making aspects to the IC will also have to be determined and taken into consideration. Look at aspects that are within the 3–5° of being exact, although of course, the closer they are to being exact the more powerful their influence will be.

Neptune in challenging aspect will tend to make things very uncertain and often creates worry and anxiety because of concerns about the outcome of matters (within the realm of the IC as discussed). “What am I going to do about my mother or father because they now seem to be displaying dementia?”, “Should I look for a home where they can be looked after?” or “Should I move them from their home to my house?” are perfect examples of questions that may arise.

“How might this affect the family and what will I need to do within the framework of my home to accommodate them?” would be the next question. You can now understand the energies of Neptune influencing these areas of life in this example.

Neptune in challenging aspect can make things difficult, and there will likely be other hinderances along the way. You may make a plan of action and then it must be changed because of unforeseen circumstances. You may have to shift because of this, and your original plans will need to be adapted for the new circumstances.

It is not easy to find solutions to problems when things are unclear and the road ahead is uncertain. However, the energies of the square aspect are challenging enough that these challenges will likely force you into action because of the disruption that they cause. You must find a way through the adversity, and it is likely in your hands, although of course you can ask for help. You, however, will have to make the final decision.

If we were speaking about the opposition aspect, you would find that other people are often part of the issue, and it may be these individuals that decide which way to turn. This is quite different from the square which, because of the situation at hand and how irritating the situation is, the situation itself forces you into action.

All energies are temporary but bring with them valuable lessons for moving forward.